By Ann Conger

Porter is the old head of the Helena Valley. Nearly 40 years ago, Porter and his father moved to the Helena Valley to make their new home. The father was a farmer, and the son was a rancher. Porter grew up on the family ranch, and later became a successful businessman.

Today, Porter is known as the "Old Cowboy," and his story is one of perseverance and hard work. He has lived through many changes, from the days of the old-school cowboy to the modern era of the urban rancher. But through it all, he has maintained his love for the land and the way of life that has been his home for so many years.

Porter has seen many changes over the years, but he knows that the most important thing is to preserve the traditions of the West. He believes that the old-school cowboy way of life is something that needs to be passed on to future generations.

Porter has been a part of the Helena Valley community for many years, and he has been involved in many different aspects of life in the area. He has been a respected rancher, a community leader, and a respected businessman. He has been a part of the Helena Valley for over 40 years, and he has seen many changes over that time.

Porter's story is one of perseverance and hard work, and it shows that the old-school cowboy way of life is something that needs to be preserved for future generations. He is a true cowboy, and his story is one that will continue to inspire others for years to come.